For the other people in the audience, the boys and girls from the local school, a vocal group of the local community, represented by the four boys, asked questions of the panelists. Each of the boys was allowed to pose just one question, but if time permitted, they were invited to add additional comments. The boys were benefited from the opportunity of participating in the discussion. The boys were allocated an opportunity to ask questions but they did not take the chance. The panelists mentioned that the boys had good questions, but the boys did not ask questions.
